Last month, the EU and G7 imposed sanctions prohibiting the import of all non-industrial Russian diamonds, including rough, cut, and polished. Starting in September, countries within these groups will also require proof of origin for each diamond.

This development is highly significant for the diamond industry and has made North American projects much more attractive.

For those interested in learning more about the diamond industry, George Read, Senior Vice President of Corporate Development, has provided an overview of the market in a video below.
