Good Day,

Recently, two unusually large diamonds (1,094 and 2,492 carats) were recovered from Karowe Diamond Mine in Botswana. Grant Mobley documented these stunning diamonds for NaturalDiamonds.com and in his opening paragraph writes:

“The discovery of yet another remarkable diamond at Botswana’s Karowe Mine a staggering 1,094-carat gem-quality rough diamond reaffirms the nation’s position as a leader in the world of natural diamonds. This newly recovered gem comes hot on the heels of the announcement of a 2,492-carat rough diamond just weeks ago, a discovery that stunned the world. Finding not one, but two diamonds of this magnitude in such a short time is nothing short of extraordinary. In the early 4,000 years of diamond recovery history, fewer than ten gem-quality diamonds over 1,000 carats have ever been found.”

The dominant diamond populations recovered from the Star and Orion South Kimberlites have been shown to have diamond size frequency distributions that are Currently available Star and Orion South diamond statistics strongly suggest that Exceptional diamonds can be recovered from the future mines on Star and Orion South.
